PORTO RICO'S CROP NEWS

First Monthly Bulletin Issued by the Weather Bureau.

Charts and Tables Concerning Climatic Conditions in the Island. An Interesting Contribution on the Subject of Coffee-Raising by Capt. Hansard-Running a Pinutation.

The first monthly report of the Porto Rico section of the climate and crop service of the Weather Bureau, that for May, 1899, has been received at the central office in this city. It has been prepared under the direction of Prof. Willis L. Moore, Chief of the Weather Bureau, by Section Director R. M. Geddings, stationed at San Juan. The publication is issued in quarto form, and contains two charts Illustrating the mean temperature and distribution of rainfall, respectively, with tables giving the detailed observations, several pages being devoted to a discussion of the condi-

A very interesting article on coffee cul tivation, by Capt. Arthur C. Hansard, Luquillo, is also presented. The report is printed in both Spanish and English, and is the first publication of its kind to be issued for Porto Rico. The fact that this interesting publication has been made possible shows that a great deal of energetic and effective work in securing observers and organizing the service has been per-formed by the Weather Bureau during the past year, For the week ending May 27 dry and hot past year,

For the week ending May 27 dry and hot weather prevailed throughout the island, proving injurious to corn, rice, and the crops recently planted. In addition strong easterly winds proved injurious. The conditions have been, however, favorable for field work. The grinding of cane is still going on in some districts, the density of the juice running between 81-2 and 19 degrees. The dry weather is affecting the cane recently planted. The yield of to-hacro is reported as generally satisfactory, but the prices obtained are low. Coffee does not appear to have been injuriously affected by the drought and a large yield is indicated. Vegetables and the minor fruits need rain.

The following climatic summary is given: "The monthly mean temperature of

The following climatic summary is given: "The monthly mean temperature of the island, deduced from the reports of nineteen stations is 78.1 degrees. Comparisons with former years cannot be made, as normals are not obtainable. The mean temperature at San Juan, 78.7 degrees, is but 0.6 degrees below the normal for twenty-five years. The highest temperature for the month was 95 degrees, at Bayamon, on the 23d, 24th, 26th, and 27th, and at Corazal, on the 27th; the lowest temperature for the month was 57 degrees, at Adjuntas, on the 1st; the absolute range being 28 degrees." being 38 degrees."

The report upon coffee raising by Capt.
Arthur C. Hansard, is extremely interesting and gives an excellent idea of the industry in the Island. It is in part as lows:

"Lands selected for the planting of coffee are usually virgin forest, and of this there remains a very great extent in Porto Rico, but if this is not desired, there are many parts in which partly cleared and improvof hand can be bought at moderate prices but the former is better in many respects. Hilly land should be selected, for while coffee will grow on the low-lying land, no great results can be expected. At an elevation of over 1,500 feet the necessary nt of moisture and coolness may be amount of moisture and coorness may be obtained, and at such elevations also the heccessary and suitable trees for shade will also do well. Having selected the site for a plantation, all unsuitable trees should be felled, thereby at once and forshould be felled, thereby at once and for-ever ridding yourself of what in after years may be found a great nuisance. I am very strongly of the opinion that all standing timber be cleared off and plan-tains and bananas, as a temporary shade,  talms and banamas, as a temporary shade, with properly selected shade trees planted at regular intervals. There is a very great diversity of equinion on the subject of shade, many going so far as to say "no slunde," but it is much a matter of clevation. At low latitudes heavy shading is of great importance whereas at 2,000 feet above sea level, young plants would require a tair amount, which should be cleared out and lessened as the plants get older, by which time the planter will have gained some knowledge as to the amount required. A rocky soil is suitable If, as is generally the case, a porous soil.

Very young and small plants give the best results; they are cheaper and can be easily removed with ball of earth, thus securing their taking root quicker, they can be kept in better shape, and give a crop as soon as, often acouser than, larger plants. A plantation to look well, and for the great convenience of weeding and gathering the crop, should of weeding and gathering the crop, should be laid out in straight lines, and holes should be dug for the plants at six or eight feet apart, with a shade tree in every fourth or fifth hole, and in every fourth ross. From the time of planting till the stants are sufficiently expanded to keep lown weed by their own shade, constant weeding is very necessary. After the first ear or two a hoe should not be used for this, for while the work will be much cheaper, the soil is continually worn away from the roots of the trees and is washed away. Burying the weed between the rows is a good method, but it may also be bank-BEST BREAD IN TOWN, ed or scattered, each system having its Pulping should take piace as soon as possible; the same day as gathering, and after from twenty-four to thirty-six hours' fermentation it should be thoroughly washed. It is now ready to be dried, but as coffee ripens here at the rainy season, it becomes a very difficult matter without machinery. After drying coffee will keep a great length of time in parchment skin and it will be found better to leave it in this unless required for sale in a local market. If shipped to the United States there are saveral establishments in New York, which have all the necessary machinery for preparing it for the market and, knowing the requirements as they do, it is knowing the requirements as they do, it is only to be inferred that they can do it as well if not better than ourselves withou-the liability to damage from damp or wet weather. Firemen from Engine Company No. 59, nearby, hastened into the street. From the house which was the centre of all the turmoil rushed a man, apparently in hot pur suit of the burgiars. Plainly he had not stopped to put on his shoes, for his white socks showed uncovered. "Where did they go." he demanded breathlessly of the assembled firemen, and then flung himself into the vacant lot. He was the second of the robbers who had gone down the halls. When his ac-complice ran into the street he waited behind, pulled from his pockets a pair of white socks, drew them over his shoes, and resorted to the artifice of pretending ing 137th Street, when he saw a man ap-pear as if from the ground and creep to-ward the fence. Here was the burg ar who had made his way down the fire escape. He had leaped over the rear fence, broken a basement window of the 137th Street house, and all the time had been hiding in the cellar.

along with a lot of hay and straw. The wheat had just been hauled away. The into the street. His cry reassembled the searchers. Many did not want to dress caused by Mrs. Bowman saturatthis time, but ran from their doors in canty attire.

East in 137th Street sped the fugitive

Watchers from windows gave the direc-tion, and after him raced the pursuets clad and unclad, with hue and cry that lined the way with startled faces. Clear to the East River led the chase, but at the water front the quarry was lost.

Returning home once more, the disgusted posse made a rag man and propped the figure against a back fence. burglar," they said tauntingly to the po-licemen. "Can you catch him?"

Mr. Johnston had a good view of one of the fleeing burglars and from the description tenants say he is one of a band who broke into the house and robbed it.

Suspected of Murder. Norfolk, Va., Aug. 8 .- Charles Wyatt, a storekeeper of Scottsville, a suburb of Portsmouth, was murdered by a negro burglar last Thursday morning, and the assassin made his escape. Two men were next day arrested on suspicion, and are being held. The third suspect was arrest-ed in Norfolk yesterday. John Smith, alias Walter Scott, is the man. When arrested pawn tickets for three watches were found in his pockets. The timepieces were recovered. One of them has been identified as Wyatt's, and another as that of Capt. L. L. Hudgins, who was assaulted and robbed at his store in the same neighborhood three weeks ago. The prison has been committed for examination.
